

I do not want the FCC to implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. I have been on the no call list in Indiana since inception and I no longer get unsolicited calls at home. I used to get several calls per week, and some even left messages on my answering machine. Now I am not afraid of who it might be when I answer the phone in the evening and my personal time is not interrupted by people I do not want to talk to. I do not want even those I have previously done business with to be able to bother me about new business they might want. I prefer to make contact when I need the service. I have been informed that the federal law, which could overrule the laws in Indiana, is not as protective as our laws already, so I do not want my protection weakened.
